SAN FRANCISCO FEMALE HOSPITAL.—Location, 615 Taylor street. This hospital was opened for the reception of patients on the first day of April, 1868. The object of the institution is the care of poor, sick women. There is no rule as to the nativity, religion, or social condition. It is a charity in the broadest sense of the term. Any woman who is poor and sick is entitled to share its benefits. It is a general hospital for all diseases, and for lying-in; also, a home for foundlings and abandoned children. There have been a very large number of outside patients treated, the physician and surgeon being in attendance every morning from ten to eleven o'clock to treat any poor persons who may come. It was supported by voluntary contributions until 1870, when the State appropriated $5.000 a year for its support. In 1879 the appropriation was reduced to $3,000. Since that year this appropriation has been withdrawn entirely, consequently fewer patients are admitted free. The Hospital is under the care of Dr. C. B. Hutchins.
