CANALS AND WATER DITCHES.

In February, 1867, there were reported as having been constructed in this State to that date, five thousand three hundred and twenty-eight miles of artificial water courses for mining purposes, at an expense of over fifteen million dollars. The Surveyor-General reports, for 1874, six hundred and eighty-two ditches constructed for mining purposes, with an aggregate length of five thousand six hundred and twenty-eight miles, and a supply of two hundred and eighty-one thousand eight hundred and forty inches per day. There are also six hundred and thirty ditches used for irrigating one hundred and forty thousand acres of land. In addition to the ditches enumerated above, there are numerous enterprises organized to supply water for municipal purposes. Thirty-six interior cities and towns are thus supplied, and the capital employed amounts to many millions of dollars. The Spring Valley Water Works Company, of San Francisco, is an extensive and costly undertaking, with a capital of $10,000,000. The county of El Dorado has nine hundred, Nevada seven hundred and thirty, Placer four hundred and ninety-two, and Trinity four hundred and forty miles of mining ditches. The county of Los Angeles has nearly four hundred miles of ditches, and extensive works for the supply of water for irrigating purposes have been completed in Kern, Merced, San Joaquin, San Bernardino, Siskiyou, Tulare, Yolo, and several other agricultural counties of the State.

BANKS AND BANKING.

The number of banking institutions transacting business at San Francisco is thirty-seven; Commercial banks, fourteen; private bankers, eight; savings banks, fifteen. In the interior of the State there are one hundred and three. Commercial, fifty-four; private bankers, thirty; savings banks, nineteen. There are eleven National Gold Banks in the State, with an aggregate capital of about five million dollars, of which two are located at San Francisco, with a capital and line of deposits of about five and one-half million dollars. The total paid-up working capital of the commercial banks of San Francisco is about twenty-five million dollars. Aggregate capital and deposits, January 1, 1875: Commercial banks, $54,953,337. Savings banks, $55,021,177. Total, $109,974,514. Three of the commercial banks of San Francisco, Bank of California, Merchants Exchange Bank, and the Bank of Nevada, each have a paid-up capital of five million dollars. The London and San Francisco and the Anglo-Californian Bank, each have a capital of three million dollars.
