AREA AND RESOURCES.

The Territory of Utah is situated between 37° and 42° north latitude, and between 109° and 115° west longitude, being about 345 miles in length from north to south, and 320 miles in width, with an estimated area of 103,000 square miles, or 65,920,000 acres. It is divided in the center by the Wasatch Range of mountains, which rise to a height ranging from 4,000 to 7,000 feet above the level of the adjacent valleys, the highest peaks of which are covered with perpetual snow. The elevation of some of the valleys in the settled portion of the Territory is fixed at 6,000 feet above the level of the sea. That portion of Utah lying west of the Wasatch Mountains forms a part of the extensive and sterile region known as the Great Basin, the rivers and lakes of which have no communication with the sea. Although gold and silver quartz lodes have been discovered in this Territory, and copper, iron, and lead are known to exist within its limits, owing to the general discouragement of mining enterprises by the Mormon leaders, but little has been done in this department. Hitherto, agriculture and stock raising have constituted the principal business of the large population, composed of representatives from every civilized portion of the globe. There are about 200,000 acres of land under cultivation, producing grain, fruits, and vegetables of the best quality. The Territory produces about 500,000 sacks of flour each year, from which the population of Montana is mainly supplied. Quantities of dried fruit, produced here each year, also supply the same market. Cotton has been extensively raised in Southern Utah, the soil and climate being well adapted to its production, and the manufacture of this staple is carried on to a considerable extent.

AGRICULTURAL.

"Cache County (the granary of Utah) comprises fifteen cities and settlements; Washington County, (the cotton country of Utah) eleven; San Pete County, eleven; Kane County, (named in honor of the brother of the famous Arctic explorer) eight; Iron County, eight; Millard County, (with Fillmore, the former capital of Utah, principal) six; Great Salt Lake County, five; eleven more counties, including thirty-two settlements and cities. Total, ninety-six settlements and cities. Utah consists of about 100,000 souls. About 7,000 of them are farmers, who have under cultivation about 140,000 acres of land. The Territory produces about 480,000 sacks of flour yearly. A large quantity of dried fruit is also raised, part of which
