THE ALAMEDA ENCINAL.

The pioneer and only newspaper of the town of Alameda, is now in its seventh year of publication, and is firmly established, with a reputation, at home and abroad, of which its proprietor and editor, Mr. F. K. Krauth, may justly feel proud. The Alameda Encinal is eminently high-toned, and admits into its columns no matter, whether advertising or reading, that may not be read by any man, woman, or child in the land. This is its pride. As an advertising medium for first-class patronage, it has no superior in the State. In evidence that Mr. Krauth has a firm conviction of its stability, and an unqualified belief in the brilliant future of the town, he has just imported direct from Cincinnati, Ohio, a Wells cylinder press, at a cost of some $1,500, with which to print the rapidly increasing edition of the Encinal. The paper is altogether worthy of a generous and general support.
