Grass Valley, Nevada Co, P O 4 miles s w of Nevada City, an incorporated town, and connected with surrounding places by well constructed turnpikes. The Central Pacific Railroad is thirteen miles distant, at Colfax, to which place daily lines of stages run. A route for a railroad has been surveyed from the same point, passing through Grass Valley to Nevada, and a narrow gauge line is proposed to be built upon it. The construction of a V or lumber floating flume is also proposed, from the mountain forests, which, by furnishing lumber and fuel at cheap rates, will greatly facilitate mining operations and add to the business of the town.
Grass Valley is distinguished for the number and value of its quartz mines, and the successful manner in which they are worked, it being the principal mining locality of this class in the State. Operations have been carried on since 1851, and always with increasing prospects. The town is well built, containing many fire-proof houses, and the private residences, embowered in shade trees and adorned with brilliant flowers, present a pleasant and attractive appearance. The soil of the city and the neighborhood is adapted to the growth of trees and vines, and fruit and wine are an available resource of the people. One newspaper, the Union, is published daily, and the Foothill Tidings weekly.
