Petaluma, Sonoma Co, P O and incorporated town, 16 miles south of Santa Rosa, and at the head of navigation on Petaluma Creek, ten miles from San Pablo Bay, and 42 miles north-west of San Francisco. The San Francisco and North Pacific Railroad runs from Donahue, eight miles south, to Cloverdale, forty-eight miles north, passing through Petaluma, and daily stage lines extend to San Rafael, Tomales, Bloomfield, Boodega, and other points. The Marin and Sonoma Railroad, a narrow-gauge, is proposed to connect with the North Pacific Coast Railroad at San Rafael. This is one of the most prosperous of the agricultural towns of the State, having a population of about 3,500, and is the shipping point for a large extent of fertile and cultivated country, embracing much of Sonoma and Marin counties. The location is commanding, the town is well built, and fine hotels, capacious warehouses, superior schools, numerous churches, public halls, and business places of a substantial character adorn the streets. The private residences are elegant and tasteful, and the climate is delightful and salubrious. The schools of Petaluma are very properly the pride of the citizens, and attract many families from less favored localities to reside here. The number of children in the town, between the ages of 5 and 17, is 872. There are six finely built public school houses, and 14 teachers. Six hundred pupils attend the primary and grammar schools. A High School was organized in July, 1873, by Dr. T. M. Rose, at which are 70 students of both sexes. Manufacturing is carried on quite extensively, there being six wagon and carriage-making establishments, and three saddle and harness shops, two flouring mills, and two tanneries, all of which are largely engaged in their various works. Another important resource of Petaluma, recently developed, is the quarrying of lava blocks, which are much used in paving in San Francisco. In this over 100 men are engaged, and a dozen or more teams are employed in hauling the blocks to the creek, where they are shipped to their destination. From 5,000 to 6,000 are made daily, and sold at the landing at $50 per thousand. Thus Petaluma exhibits unusual enterprise in developing various resources, as well as advanced intelligence and refinement in its elegant appearance and superior schools. One newspaper, the Argus, is published weekly.
