Winters, Yolo Co, P O 25 miles s w of

Woodland, has recently risen into prominence with the construction of the Vaca Valley Railroad, which when completed, will connect the beautiful and fertile Berryessa Valley with the California Pacific Railroad as Vaca Station. The surrounding country is very fertile, and the scenery and climate are most attractive. Large quantities of wheat are produced, and orchards and vineyards yield abundantly of every fruit known to a semi-tropical or temperate climate. The region is the foothills of the Coast Range with the broad Sacramento Valley to the eastward, and groves of deciduous and evergreen oaks lend a pleasant charm to the scenery. The new branch railroad from Vaca Junction to its terminus at Winters, is well built and equipped, and will give easy and rapid access to the principal markets.

Woodland, Yolo Co, P O and County seat,

16 miles northwest of Sacramento, has a population of 3,000, and occupies a pleasant site in a grove of ancient oaks, surrounded by a large extent of exceedingly fertile and productive country. The California Pacific Railroad passes through the place, being the Marysville branch, joining the main, or Sacramento branch at Davisville, $\frac{5}{8}$ miles southwest. This branch formerly crossed the Sacramento River and continued to Marysville, but the destruction of a section of road by flood, caused the disuse of the portion north of the river, and at present Knight's Landing, nine miles from Woodland, is the terminus. At Woodland are wine manufactories, breweries, many mercantile establishments, warehouses for the storage of wheat, an extensive flouring mill, church, social and benevolent organizations, a well established college, the Hesperian, one of the finest public school buildings in the interior of the State, and two newspapers, the Democrat, and Mail, are published weekly.
