Baker County. Bounded north by Union County, east by the Territory of Idaho, south by the State of Nevada, and west by Grant County. Area, 11,000 square miles; population, 4,000; assessed valuation of property in 1873, $639,038. County seat, Baker City. Principal towns, Amelia, Auburn, Bridgeport, Clarksville, Conner Creek, El Dorado, Humboldt, Basin, Jordan Valley, Malheur, Pocatoumas and Rye Valley. The county is of large area, comprising all that portion of the State south of the north fork of Powder River, and east of the 118th meridian. Powder River, Burnt River, the Malheur, and Owyhee are considerable streams emptying into the Snake, or Lewis fork of the Columbia, which runs along the eastern border of the county. The southern portion is quite barren of vegetation, but possesses mines of value. The northern section is generally well adapted to grazing, the valleys of the rivers are very fertile, and mines of gold and silver exceedingly rich in those metals are found. Ores of copper and iron, and veins of coal abound. The Blue and Eagle ranges of mountains cross the county and give rise to several large rivers. The climate is of the usual character of eastern Oregon, the winters sometimes being quite cold, but never the extreme experienced in the same latitude east of the Rocky Mountains. The extremes of heat and cold as shown by the thermometer are 105° in the summer to 13° in the winter, but these are rarely reached. The general altitude is about 3,800 feet above the sea, and as usual in such regions, the climate is pleasant and healthy. The summers are dry, and snow falls in winter, but is seldom lasting, as the cold is not continuous. Game is abundant, consisting of elk, deer, bear, antelope, and birds of many varieties. The county is traversed by the stage road, from Salt Lake to the Dalles, and the great river along the eastern border affords cheap transportation for supplies and products.

Benton County. Bounded north by Polk, east by Linn, from which it is separated by the Willamette River, south by Lane and Douglas, and west by the Pacific Ocean. Area, 1,110 square miles. Assessed valuation of property in 1874, $2,214,379. Population 4,700. County seat, Corvallis. Principal towns, Alesia, Elk City, Junction City, Monroe, Newport, Oneatta, Siletz, Toledo, and Yaquina. The county comprises a section of the State extending from the Willamette to the ocean, and includes the broad plains of that noble valley and the forest clad hills of the Coast Range, within its limits. The Willamette is navigable a greater part of the year, and on the coast are several harbors, that of the Yaquina Bay being the second in importance in the State. At this point large vessels and ocean steamers call and land in safety. The valleys of the Yaquina, Mary's River, Kings, and the great valley which forms the eastern portion of the county, are exceedingly fertile, producing cereals, vegetables and fruits in abundance. The more elevated land is either well adapted to grazing or covered with forests, there being little valueless land in the county. Here are fine opportunities for settlement, the fertile soil, the genial climate, accessible localities, and a State and County free from indebtedness, invite the industrious of every nation to come and make a pleasant and prosperous home.
Officers: Erastus Holgate, County Judge; B. W. Wilson, Clerk; C. W. Fitch, District Attorney; Judson S. Palmer, Sheriff; Wallace Baldwin, Treasurer; Peter Withers, Assessor; James A. Canthorn, Surveyor; T. J. Right, Coroner; E. A. Miller, Superintendent Public Schools.
