The population is about 1,500, and being in the midst of one of the best agricultural sections of the Territory, and made accessible by its proximity to the Central Pacific Railroad at Corinne, and also to the Utah Northern at Soda Springs, it bids fair to become the most important and populous town of Idaho. The town enjoys a large trade with the surrounding country. Two schools are maintained, for which the public funds afford ample support, and it is the place for holding the United States and Territorial District Courts
