Heber, Wasatch Co, P O and County seat, 40 miles south east of Salt Lake City, is on the Timpanogos, or Provo River, about midway between its head and its embouchure in Utah Lake, in the midst of a beautiful valley, east of the Wasatch Range, 13 miles in length by from one to seven in breadth, of excellent agricultural land. Near the city are quarries of marble and red sandstone, both excellent for ornamental and building purposes; also numerous warm springs of superior medicinal qualities, which are resorted to by visitors for drinking and bathing, with healthful effect. A short distance northwest are the Twin Peaks, two lofty buttes rising to an altitude of near 12,000 feet. The population numbers about 500.
