Yale, Yale District, P O, is situated at the head of navigation on the Lower Fraser, 180 miles from Victoria, nestling in a secluded position at the foot of the lofty and precipitous mountains of the Cascade Range. The surrounding scenery is exceedingly wild, majestic and romantic. It is at this point that the great military road which winds through the Big Cañon of the Fraser commences, the completion of which made it a successful rival of Douglas. Its superiority for the transhipment of goods to the gold mines of Cariboo has secured to it all the forwarding business, and steamers are employed in carrying freight and passengers to it twice a week during the summer time. As the river freezes during the winter time, the communication with New Westminster is very irregular. Hill's Bar, about half a mile below the town, was one of the richest bars on the Fraser River in 1858, and continues to be worked up to the present time by Chinamen. Weekly stages leave this place for Cariboo. The present population numbers about 125 inhabitants.
