According to the University Bulletin issued in May, 1899, there were at that time 2,438 students in all departments. Young women are admitted to the University on equal terms with young men.

It is only 32 years since the passage of the Act establishing a University; only 27 since the buildings at Berkeley were occupied, but the above summary shows that magnificent work has been done in that time; that the University has taken rank among the great institutions of learning of the world

By the generosity of Mrs. Phoebe Hearst, one of its Regents, the University was recently able to invite the architects of the world to enter a competition, which has resulted in a scheme of construction worthy of the magnificent site and worthy of the great State of California. Many years and many mill-
