

ions of dollars will be required for carrying out the plans adopted, but when finished, the University of California will have the most complete and most magnificent dwelling place ever conceived by the mind of man.

CONCLUSION.

The scope of this work will not allow a more thorough outline of the resources and attractions of Alameda County. We have ample material for a volume and regret that this sketch, which is necessarily confined chiefly to statistics, could not be made more fully to represent the natural, industrial and educational advantages of the County.
