This society has under its supervision a Home where friendless or destitute girls under the age of fourteen and over two years, and boys under ten and over three years, may be received and provided for until permanent homes in Christian families can be secured for them. The adults in the Home are embraced under two classes: Those who are able to labor, and who are received temporarily until they can obtain employment; and those who, by reason of age or infirmity, are incapacitated for exertion and are without means or friends to care for them.

The building of this institution is located on Franklin Street, between Post and Geary, and is a fine and commodious structure. It consists of a main building and north wing, two stories high, with full basement and French roof.
