1906 Earthquake Centennial Alliance

1000 Oak Street, Oakland, CA

(510) 238-7208

Objective: Use the centennial of the 1906 earthquake to highlight a century of progress toward understanding earthquake hazards and reducing risks as well as to commemorate the cultural and social response to this historic event.

April 18, 2006, will mark the 100th anniversary of the San Francisco earthquake and fire. The 1906 earthquake was a seminal event in the scientific study of earthquakes, as well in as the cultural and social history of California. The upcoming 100th anniversary provides a unique opportunity to increase public awareness of seismic hazard as well as earthquake preparedness and mitigation. It also affords a retrospective analysis of the ways in which this major natural disaster affected the personal lives, culture, economy and development of Northern California.

The '06 Earthquake Centennial Alliance has been formed to help coordinate efforts and activities between organizations throughout Northern California planning to commemorate the earthquake. Many groups are already beginning their planning; our purpose in forming the '06 Alliance is to maximize the impact and reach these activities and to avoid scheduling problems and duplication of effort. Our goal is to help coordinate a Northern California-wide centennial commemoration that brings together policy makers, scientists, engineers, historians, teachers, and emergency responders to explore the lessons learned from this earthquake and ways to minimize the impact of future earthquakes on the San Francisco Bay area.

Currently more than 95 groups and organizations have joined the '06 Alliance. The Alliance plans to provide guides and brochures to the entire collection of centennial events as well as marketing and overall coordination of public relations for a wide range of planned activities:

- Public exhibitions at museums, university campuses, retrofit projects, and other venues
- Park/Open Space exhibits
- Field trips for the public on Bay Area faults
- Public lecture series
- Web-based activities and virtual field trips
- Educational/Curriculum material
