

*For convenience in the future...
put telephone facilities
in your plans*

The blue-print stage is the time to include built-in telephone conduit and outlets. During construction, the cost is trifling. Just a few pieces of pipe or other conduit material leading to convenient outlet locations will provide raceways for telephone wires. Later on telephones can be added — or moved to other locations — without drilling holes or running wire along baseboards.

For free help in planning modern, built-in telephone wiring, call your local telephone company number and ask for free "Telephone Planning Service."